[A] Mr. Brown of Brown and Wetherall Country Casuals, a clothing manufacturing company, was Jane's boss. He always said that to achieve success you needed brains, diligence*, but most of all, luck. Jane did not believe in luck and knew that the company went bankrupt* and all of its staff lost their jobs because the management had not used their brains and enjoyed too many three-hour lunch breaks.

[B] "What are you going to do now, Jane?" Ms. Kate Potts, Mr. Brown's old secretary, asked her.

"I don't know. Perhaps I'll go on holiday and think about what to do (32-a) next. I don't know if I want to stay in design work." They were standing (32-b) in the building behind the factory. She looked at the piles of high-quality jackets made of wool.

"I'm not sure I'm good at design work."
(32-c)

Kate did not answer as she was thinking hard.

"I could offer you a holiday. Few people know this, but my parents live (32-d) in the country on a farm. It's lovely countryside nearby. It would be a good place for you to stay to rest and plan for the future."

[C]

 the farm was in the middle of beautiful, rolling* countryside. The farmhouse and outbuilding* were old and needed painting, while the orchards* around them were overgrown with* tall grass surrounding neglected fruit trees which were full of fruit.

"Plums over there! Apples behind and pears! When I was a child, this would be the busiest time of the year and my parents would work very long hours, but now mom and dad are in their eighties and don't want to run the farm anymore, so that's why everything looks old and in need of repair."

[D] It was true that Kate's parents were now too old to do much work

apart from feeding their chickens and picking a few vegetables for their lunch from their garden behind the house. ① The trees' branches above them were weighed down with large purple fruit. ② The juice from the plum ran down Jane's chin when she bit into it. ③

④ “This is delicious, Kate. Much better than most plums you can buy in the supermarket,” said Jane.

“Kate! I've got an idea! Your farm was famous for the high quality of its fruit. I think the soil in this area is good and rich. Kate, why don't we ...?”⁽³⁶⁾

[E] Business partners, Jane and Kate are very proud that Potts jams and preserves* are sold widely in fancy food stores and supermarkets. Old Mr. and Mrs. Potts are happy that their farm has been restored and looks beautiful again. It has even been enlarged to include a shop which sells their lovely fruits, jams and wines. A manager and his team of workers look after the orchards now, so they have no more worries.

“Mr. Brown always said that you needed a lot of luck to succeed in business and he was right.”

“I disagree, Jane. It was your good idea to use the fruit to make very good jam. It was that which made us rich. You made us our luck!”

“Well, maybe that is what luck is—seeing an opportunity and then using it.”

[F] The two women looked towards the fields of newly planted pear trees and smiled.

“As the saying goes, Jane, 38.”
