問題 2

次の英文を読み、下の問に答えなさい。

Paris Olympic athletes' meals will have French flair^{*1}

(May 04, 2024)

Freshly cooked bread, select cheeses and a wide variety of vegetables will be among the meals (A) to athletes and visitors during the 2024 Paris Olympics — including, of course, gourmet^{*2} dishes created by renowned French chefs. About 40,000 meals are expected to be served each day during the Games to the more than 15,000 athletes from 200 different countries housed at the Olympic village. Visitors, too, will be able to enjoy some specially created snacks at the different venues^{*3}.

French food services company Sodexo Live!, which was selected to oversee the catering at the athletes' village and 14 venues of the Paris Games, said it has created a total of 500 recipes, which will be offered at a sit-down eatery^{*4} for up to 3,500 athletes at the village, meant (B) the “world's largest restaurant.”

“Of course, there will be some classics for athletes, like pasta,” said Nathalie Bellon-Szabo, global CEO of Sodexo Live!. But the food will have a “very French touch.”

Athletes will also have access to “grab and go” food stands, including one dedicated only to French cuisine^{*5} cooked up by chefs. Renowned French chef Amandine Chaignot, who runs a restaurant and a café-bistro in Paris, on Tuesday unveiled one of her recipes based on the croissant^{*6}. (1) “I wanted the recipe I suggested to be representative of the French terroir^{*7}, but I wanted athletes to enjoy it at the same time,” she told The Associated Press. “It was quite obvious for me to make a croissant that I could twist. So, you have a bit of artichoke puree, a poached egg, a bit of truffle^{*8} and a bit of cheese. It's both vegetarian and still mouthwatering^{*9}.”

Every day, during the July 26–August 11 Games, a top chef — including some awarded with Michelin stars^{*10} — will cook in front of the athletes at the Olympic Village, “so (2) they'll be able to chat and better understand what French cuisine is about — and to understand a bit of our culture as well,” Chaignot said.

The Olympic Village will also feature a boulangerie^{*11} (C) fresh baguettes^{*12} and a variety of other breads. “The idea is to offer athletes the chance to grab a hot baguette for breakfast,” said baker Tony Doré, who will be working at the Olympic Village’s main restaurant. Athletes will even be able to participate in daily bakery training, and learn to make their own French baguette, said Doré.

In an effort to provide as many options as possible, meals (D) will revolve around four cuisines: French, Asian, African and Caribbean.

Paris 2024 organizers have promised to make the Games more sustainable and environment-friendly— and that includes efforts to reduce the use of plastic. To this effect, the main restaurant at the village will use only reusable dishes. Additionally, organizers say all meals will be based on seasonal products and 80% will come from France.

Plant-based^{*13} food will represent 60% of the offer for visitors at the venues, including a “vegetarian hot-dog,” said Philipp Würz, head of Food and Beverage for the Paris 2024 Committee. There’s “a huge amount of plant-based recipes that will be available (E) the general public to try, to experience and, hopefully, they will love it,” said Würz. The urban park at the Place de la Concorde^{*14}, in central Paris, will offer visitors 100% vegetarian food — a first in the Games’ history.
