Everyone agrees that the koala is a cute animal, but how much do we really know about it? “Koala” is an Australian word that means “animal that does not drink.” Koalas don’t drink because they get all the water they need by eating the leaves of eucalyptus trees. (a) It’s hard to talk about (because / lives / how / not much / the koala) is known about it. For example, no one knows if there are 400,000 koalas or only 40,000 in Australia. Koalas are hard to find because they are (b) “nocturnal”, which means they are active at night.

Koalas spend most of their lives in eucalyptus trees. Over the last 200 years, many of the trees koalas live in have been cut down to build houses or make farms. In fact, 80 percent of the koalas’ living area has disappeared. (c) their food comes from these trees, the koalas have to look for food in other places. They must go into people’s gardens (d) they meet dogs, cats and other dangers. But cars are the biggest danger. Koalas walk on roads and are often hit by cars.

Healthy koalas can live to be 20 years old. But stress can make koalas sick. (e) It can make koalas blind or unable to have babies. Their main stress is not having enough trees to live in. There are fewer and fewer koalas every year as they lose their homes, the eucalyptus trees. Soon we must find a way to save the koala.
